Maple/Holly residents unload at special meeting

By David Weller

Around 125 residents of the Maple-Holly neighborhood crowded into the Westfield Elementary School cafeteria Wednesday night to voice frustrations to city officials over public safety issues in their neighborhood.

Resident complaints raised during the evening included the need for a four-way stop at the corner of Michigan and Maple streets, the desire to get a drainage ditch that runs behind Westfield School cleaned up or covered, concerns over the possibility that the ditch contains toxic substances, anger with the addition of methadone treatment at the community clinic at the Riverbend Shopping Center, and the frustration of having to deal with prostitutes and drug dealers coming into the neighborhood.

City officials came prepared to discuss some of the questions, while other issues, such as toxins in the ditch and a highly emotional statement by Susan Kempton that West Sacramento children are dying of tumors caused by polution in the city, took them by surprise. Kempton's five-year old daughter Colleen died last year from a brain stem tumor.

The stop sign issue, which prompted a number of angry neighbors to show up at a city council meeting two weeks ago, after 5 year old Brian Sims was killed at the intersection of Michigan and Maple, became a point of contention late in the evening when some residents insisted that the city promised to tell them by Wednesday if they get a four-way stop.

City Manager Joe Goeden explained in detail why the city cannot put up stop signs at the intersection without first going through a number of legal steps.

"Stop signs only cost about $45 a piece. If I had my choice I would go out there tonight, dig the holes and drop them in," he said.

If the city were to just decide to put in stop signs, it would open itself up to a potential liability suit if anyone were hurt in an accident at the intersection, according to Goeden. The city has adopted standards developed by Caltrans which state that traffic must be moving through the intersection at a particular rate before a stop sign can be put in.

Engineers fear that a four-way stop at an intersection which should not have one may cause accidents instead of preventing them. Goeden pointed out that special conditions justifying a four-way stop may apply at Michigan and Maple because drivers coming down Maple tend to speed.

He also explained that the city needs to adopt new criteria before it can decide to install a four way stop. Adopting new criteria requires new traffic studies, and then action by the city council.

Frustrated residents responded from the audience with various comments including, "Even if children are dying?" and "If you don't fix it, we will sue you."

Speed is not the only issue making the intersection dangerous. Children walking to Westfield School from the west have to cross either the intersection or a drainage ditch running down Maple.

Some audience members said that the ditch was found to have toxic chemicals in it. Others said they were sure that businesses are still dumping old batteries in it.

City officials said they were unaware of any toxic substances found in the ditch, and that to put in a pipe and cover the drain would cost the city about $4 million.

Local fire department official saved with hielp from colleagues

By Steve Marschke

The West Sacramento Fire Department helped save the life of one of its own high-ranking personnel on Saturday, Aug. 19.

"It was late at night -- around 10:30 p.m. that night," related Division Chief Ken Sawitzky, who experienced the close call while at home with his fiancee, Alfradette, and their 15-month old son.

"I was just around the house relaxing when I felt some chest pain. I didn't want to admit I was having any kind of a heart attack."

But just to be on the safe side, he called the city's Harbor Blvd. fire station to confer with Chuck Garton, and ended up talking to Captain Gary Rios instead.

"The pain became very severe, right in the middle of the chest," said Sawitzky, 52. "Captain Rios sent Station 41, located on 15th St. As usual, they were here very quickly -- it had to have been about three minutes."

Firefighters quickly saw that Sawitzky's life was in danger and began therapy for a heart attack. An ambulance crew had joined them and the division chief was taken to Sutter General Hospital.

At the hospital, Sawitzky went into "full cardiac arrest," said the report.

"I stayed conscious the whole time," said Sawitzky, speaking from his home on Tuesday. "I had a 'scrambled brain effect.' I didn't know who I was or where, just a swirl of bodies."

When Sawitzky's heart began beating out of rhythm, hospital workers had to apply an external defibrillator to shock it back into normal behavior.

"I really owe it to the group of firefighters who came along and stayed with me," he said. "It was so nice to see those faces after they shocked me. After I saw them, I never worried that it wouldn't work out."

> 'It was nice to see their faces after they shocked me. . . I never worried it wouldn't work out.'

Sawitzky, a West Sacramento resident, was transferred among hospitals and released on Friday evening. He said he had no history of heart disease either personally or in his family, and he regarded the heart attack as a "wake up call" to change his exercise and eating habits, although he had considered himself "in pretty good shape."

"I had quit smoking years ago," he commented. "But job stress can really take its toll if you're not exercising and eating well."

In a fashion typical to those who know Sawitzky and his dedication to firefighting, the division chief also used the incident to promote his departments recent purchase of an automatic external defibrillator for its own use in medical emergencies.

"If my heart had gone into beating out of rhythm before I got to the hospital, the fire department could have used that piece of equipment to save my life. It's a great addition to the department," he said.

Sawitzky is recovering at home and will take part in a one-year cardiac outreach program through his insurer, Kaiser Permanente. When -- and whether -- he returns to the West Sacramento Fire Department are still unknown, he said.

Sawitzky said he had recently been weighing the options of retirement versus continued employment at the department. He has worked as a local firefighter since 1968.

Council appeals decision

More debate on methadone center

At the request of Bill Kristoff, West Sacramento's Mayor Pro Tem (vice mayor), the city council will review on Sept. 13 an earlier planning commission decision to permit methadone treatment at a Riverbend Market clinic.

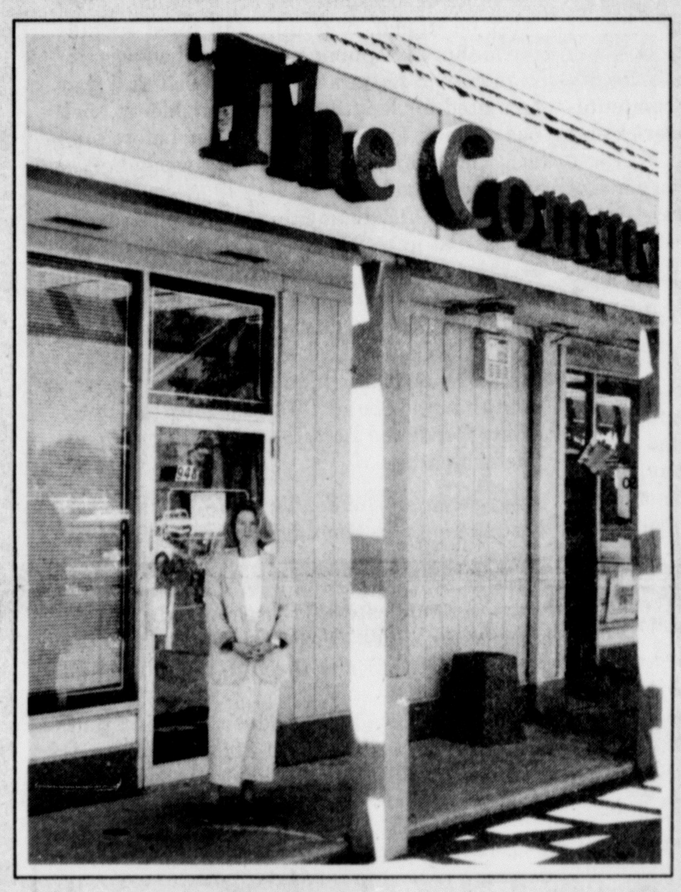

The planning commission's decision Aug. 10 was over the narrow issue of whether allowing methadone treatment for a limited number of heroin addicts fit within the current use permit for the John H. Jones Community Clinic near Kegle and Sacramento Ave.

The planning commission ruled that it did.

A number of residents have since expressed anger over the proposed methadone center, which shares the shopping center with Riverbend Market, the Broderick Post Office, and a number of small retail and professional businesses in the Broderick neighborhood.

Kristoff's request means that residents will have a second chance to hear information about the proposal and to participate in the approval process.

The clinic is run by CommuniCare Health Centers, based in Davis. Clinic directors have argued that a methadone center will not be a magnet for crime, and that only a limited number of patients will be taken on for methadone treatment. Appointments will be staggered, so that heroin-addicted patients will not be lingering at the center in groups while waiting for treatment.

Most of the county's heroin addicts live in West Sacramento, they added in a written project description for the planning department, making the site a natural one for a methadone clinic.

The clinic already offers drug treatment services.

Kristoff is filling in as manager of the Broderick Post Office near the clinic since Postmaster Ray Jones retired and the postal service has not yet approved a permanent staffing solution.

Facing narcotics battle, owner closing motel

■ Civil action by District Attorney's office was pending when owner of motel voluntarily agreed to shut down drug-troubled motel, said police lieutenant

By Steve Marschke

The Westside Motel at 3215 West Capitol Ave. (west of Harbor Blvd.) will soon be closed and razed, according to West Sacramento Police Lt. Ron Moore.

The owner has agreed to close it after the city police and county drug task force identified widespread narcotics violations among tenants of the motel, and forwarded the information to the county district attorney's office.

THE WESTSIDE MOTEL: Soon to be no more?

"There was an undercover investigation conducted late spring and early summer by YONET (the Yolo County Narcotics Enforcement Team)," said Moore. "They made many narcotics buys. We submitted all those buys and information to the D.A., and had them review it in light of abatement proceedings."

Lt. Moore said the owner, whom he identified as "Mr. Gee," was then apprised that the District Attorney's office intended to proceed in legal actions against the landlord.

"So Mr. Gee voluntarily agreed to tear the place down," said Moore. "He's closing the place down himself. He's still got to evict a couple of tenants."

Missing combination keeps post office closed

Customers of the U.S. Post Office on Merkley Ave. Friday morning were greeted with signs saying that the facility was closed "due to an emergency."

They may be relieved to know that no one had died and nothing had burned down to cause the emergency. The office staff was merely locked out of their own safe because the only person with the combination to the safe was on vacation.

The office remained closed until about 10 a.m., when the situation was resolved.

MacBlo: more restrictions would kill paper plant

By Steve Marschke

A spokesman for the Canadian partner in the $1 billion proposed West Sacramento newspaper recycling plant said Friday that the project is already financially tenuous, and if the plant is forced to further "mitigate" its sewage effects, construction will never begin.

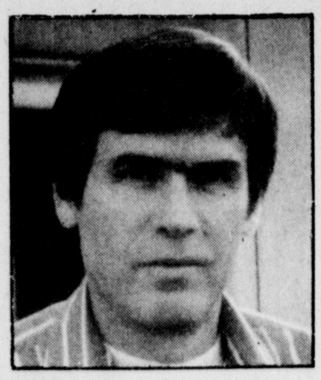

Critics, including water agencies who pull drinking water from the Delta downstream, say the plant will bring additional thermal pollution, mercury, solids and other problems to the Sacramento River. But Alan Stubbs, vice president in public affairs for MacMillan Bloedel, Ltd., which is co-sponsoring the plant, said reducing these effects will create an economic hardship.

"Mitigation measures would be so extraordinary it would make it financially untenable," he said. "The project is already tenuous. If somebody were to impose exotic mitigation, it would become unfeasible."

What I did on vacation (and what I may do to my ear)

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

A few days ago, while I was patiently waiting for two of my sons to finish getting their back-to-school haircuts, a friend of mine who swears he religiously reads this column strolled up to me and said, "So, how was your vacation?"

"What vacation?" I asked him as we stood together in front of Round Table Pizza.

"The one the News-Ledger has been saying you're on."

"Oh, that vacation," I said.

"Where'd you go?"

"Actually," I admitted, "I didn't really go anywhere. I just decided to take a month off from writing."

"How come?"

"Well," I tried to explain, "to tell you the truth, there's just never much funny to write about in August."

"Really?" asked my friend with apparent interest. "Not even something about your kids?"

"Naw," I said, "kids are never funny in August. By the time the end of the summer rolls around, they're all broke, bored to death with their friends and video games, and ticked off about having to go back to school."

"So, August just isn't your month, huh?" he asked.

I nodded my head and said, "Yeah, I've always hated August. It's too hot, the year is starting to die, and I'm reminded that the State Fair is no longer on Stockton Boulevard where it belongs. Plus my birthday is in August, and I end up getting a year older every damn time it rolls around."

"Gee," said my friend, "you sound pretty down. Isn't there anything interesting going on in your life?"

"Well," I said, perking up a bit, "I have been giving some serious thought to getting myself an earring."

"What?" asked my friend, smiling and trying hard not to laugh.

"Now why does everyone start laughing when I tell them I'm thinking about getting an earring?" I asked with irritation.

"Sorry," said my friend, "but trust me on this one, Daryl. An earring -- well, it's just not you, man."

"But lots of guys are wearing earrings now," I said. "No one thinks Barry Bonds is weird because he wears one. What's the big deal?"

"Have you asked your wife what she thinks about you getting an earring?"

"Yeah," I said, "but she just figures I'm going through another mid-life crisis?"

"Another mid-life crisis?" asked my friend. "You mean you've already had one?"

"Oh yeah," I said. "In fact, my wife claims she can document at least five of them so far."

"What about your kids?" asked my friend. "Aren't you afraid they might lose respect for you if you start wearing an earring?"

"Naw," I assured my friend. "They did that years ago."

"But doesn't it hurt to get one of those things?"

"I don't think so," I said, "but in a strange way, I think body mutilation and a little pain is part of the attraction. Otherwise I guess I'd just go down to Target and pick myself up one of those clip-ons."

"I don't know," said my friend, shaking his head. "This is West Sacramento, man. Guys just don't go around wearing earrings. Someone might think you're -- you know -- gay or something."

"You really think so?"

"Not that being gay is bad or anything," he quickly added.

"But I've got a wife and more kids than I can count," I said, lowering my voice an octave or so just in case. "I doubt if that would really be a problem."

"Well," said my friend, "I guess it's your life, but if you decide to do it, you better make sure they pierce your left ear, and not your right one."

"How come?" I asked with interest.

"You don't know?"

"Know what?"

"You're kidding? You don't know which ear to get pierced?"

"Not really," I said. "I haven't given it much thought. Why? Does it make a difference?"

"Well," said my friend, suddenly grinning from ear to ear, "I guess not."

"Hey, where are you going?" I asked him as he patted me on the shoulder and began walking away.

"I gotta be getting these videos back," he said, still smiling. "Nice seeing you, man. Talk to you later -- and good luck with your new look."

"Wait a minute," I blurted out, "I got this feeling you're not telling me something. Is wearing an earring in one ear supposed to be more cool than the other or what?"

"See you later," he hollered over his shoulder as he began making his way towards Jefferson Video, obviously trying hard to suppress a belly laugh.

"Hey," I yelled after him, "come on! Tell me! What does it matter which ear I put the darn thing in?"

SPORTS

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

Are you ready for some football!!

The N.F.L. kicks off the season on Labor Day weekend. The 49ers travel to New Orleans as 8 1/2 point favorites over the Saints. Training camp is over for the Niners and they have 16 new players and a new running game. Derek Loville will start in Ricky Watters' old spot and William Floyd will start at fullback.

The 49ers cut veteran running back Marion Butts and settled on Ricky Ervings, Adam Walker and rookie running backs Jamal Willis and Anthony Lynn.

The Raiders are four point favorites as they return to the Oakland Coliseum on Sunday at 1 p.m. to face the AFC Champion San Diego Chargers. The Raiders are searching for a kicker after Jeff Jaeger injured his right knee and appears to be out for three weeks. Look for the Raiders to sign Cary Blanchard, who kicked for the Jets in 1992 and '93 and was waived by the Saints last week.

My picks for the '95 NFL season are as follows:

IN THE NFC WEST: I choose the 49ers not only because they are a great team, but if you played the Rams, Falcons, and the new Carolina Panthers twice, you should win your division.

NFC CENTRAL - The Packers should win but this division will be very close, because the Vikings, Bears, Lions and Bucs have all improved.

NFC EAST: The Cowboys should run away with the title, but the Eagles and Cardinals picked up some free agent offensive players to help with their strong defensive units.

AFC WEST: The Raiders will battle the Broncos, Chiefs and Chargers in the NFL's best division. The Raiders' return to Oakland will help them back into the playoff picture.

CENTRAL: The Steelers and Browns will fight it out again this season, but I think the Browns will win this time.

EAST - The Dolphins and Patriots will be at the top again, but don't count out the improved Colts. Miami should win because they spent lots of dollars on free agents!

The Giants and the A's head into the most important week of the season. Both teams are in last place in their division, but have a slim chance at the wild card playoff spot. One more bad week by either team, and you may see some players traded and the young players from their minor league teams called up.

The Sacramento Knights (15-3) remain in first place after beating the Seattle Seadogs last Sunday, 9-5. The Knights play at home on Friday, Sept. 1, against Las Vegas and then again on Sunday with Arizona.

See ya next week!!

Junior tennis players from both sides of the river attend invitational

From the West Sacramento Junior Tennis Team

The tennis courts at River City High School were filled to capacity last week as young players from West Sacramento, Greenhaven, Pocket, and Land Park were brought together for two days of fun and competition. River City High School coach David Brooks invited players from the junior classes he teaches through the parks programs on both sides of the river for the first-ever West Sacramento Junior Invitational Tennis Gathering. "We put it together in less than a week and it was a great event," said Brooks. "I've always wanted to get kids together from different areas to play with and against each other and to have the environment more conducive to fun than to be so focused on winning and losing. We didn't have a formal tournament where you might only get to play one match and then be sent packing if you lose. We just played and played and played!"

Nearly 40 players were invited and, with little more than 48-hours of notice in some cases, 25 players showed up ranging from first-graders to high-schoolers. The kids played singles, doubles, mixed doubles, and a variety of games and hitting drills. Representatives of Greeenhaven's Lewis Park were the winners of the "Crazy Tennis" tournament. Matt Doughty and Kyle Kumasaki teamed to defeat West Sac.'s Chris Wright and Jay Morehouse in the final. In "Crazy Tennis" the ball can bounce any number of times be-

News-Ledger Editorial

Scattered commentary

The anger (some reasonable and some not) which residents of the Maple/Holly area recently expressed against city officials reminds us that, whatever is going on with the city's development issues and debates concerning its south, the north still merits attention.

It is hard to argue that the Broderick and Bryte neighborhoods, despite the drive for cityhood, are not still in decline. From drug houses to gang activity to loud music blaring from cars in the middle of the night, these residential neighborhoods face persistent quality-of-life concerns. Whatever happens in the rest of the city must be weighed as to its effect on the whole -- including the north.

Councilman Bill Kristoff's request for the city council to take a look at the planning commission's approval of a methadone clinic for the Riverbend Market center was wise.

The council has an informal policy of reviewing any particularly thorny issues handled by the planners, if there is unusual public concern. A council hearing on the methadone center can only help air those concerns and improve communication -- always good goals for government.

There is no reason for planning commissioners to be offended by this attempt by the city council to "look over their shoulders," it's just that in West Sacramento, the buck stops with the council, and the council is the appropriate agency to make the tough calls.

Solution to the hooker problem: (if you can stand one more discussion of this topic):

The other day, a well-dressed middle aged couple in a pretty new Buick Regal were seen pulled over on Merkley Ave., getting directions from a well-known prostitute (whose occupation, no doubt, would have come as quite a surprise to the visitors).

A flash of genius struck an onlooker. How about turning the city's streetwalkers from a liability to an asset?

Just declare them all "West Sacramento Downtown Hostesses" and provide them each with a carnation and a name badge ("Hi, I'm CANDI, Welcome to West Sacramento!").

Tourists would think we're the friendliest town in the west. . .

Ignoring facts

Both Mr. Cushing and the News-Ledger editorial ("Not So Fond Farewell..." and "City and Legal Group...", News-Ledger, August 9, 1995) simply ignore the facts about Legal Services of Northern California's representation of West Sacramento residents.

Legal Services of Northern California, and David Jones in particular, have for the past seven years aggressively represented clients in actions challenging substandard housing conditions in West Sacramento. Some of these cases have involved close cooperation with the City of West Sacramento, including local law and code enforcement. These case include a successful class action lawsuit brought against the former slumlord owner of Pine Square apartments, Andre Alfaro, which was joined by local code and law enforcement and which resulted in the clean-up of the apartments and Alfaro being forced to relinquish title to the property; a class action lawsuit challenging substandard conditions at Bryte Gardens apartments; and numerous individual representation of persons against slumlords, including many absentee owners.

Perhaps the best example of the cooperation of LSNC and local law enforcement was in the case of Capital City Apartments last year, where LSNC worked with local residents to form a neighborhood watch in cooperation with the West Sacramento Police Department to deal with prostitution and drugs. When the owners sought to interfere and evict the tenants, LSNC called upon local police officers to serve as witnesses. Similarly, when the managers of the former Simon Terrace Apartments were failing to make repairs and harassing disabled residents with security guards who represented that they were police officers, former Mayor Ray Jones sent them to Legal Services, which worked in collaboration with Mr. Jones and local law enforcement to get the managers to obey the law.

Other examples of cooperation between the City and LSNC include the joint effort to develop transitional housing facilities to be operated by the Broderick Christian Center, the agreement to develop the affordable West Capitol Courtyards, (which is featured by the City in its promotional brochures), and the commitment obtained by LSNC by Lighthouse Marina to donate $75,000 to the City's West Sacramento Housing Development Corporation.

It is therefore simply not true to state, as did the News-Ledger, that LSNC or David Jones have not worked on numerous occasions with the City. Regrettably, the News-Ledger failed to check the facts.

Cushing's implication that everyone who ever lived in a West Sacramento motel is a criminal is equally mistaken. The fact is, many poor and law abiding residents live in the motels because they cannot afford the luxury that Cushing has -- owning a house. It is not "grandstanding" to point out this simple truth. Low paying jobs do not provide enough money for many to rent a house or apartment, and so people live in the motels. LSNC represents such people, not prostitutes and drug merchants. Cushing chooses instead to distort reality.

Cushing's sweeping condemnation of the poor as criminals is disturbing enough, but his careful and exacting identification of the race of the man and woman he described talking to one another is even more so. Why does their race matter?

Legal Services of Northern California does not, nor has it ever, condoned prostitution or illegal drug use, despite the outlandish suggestion made to the contrary by Cushing. Cushing's suggestion that David Jones and LSNC have targeted the City and somehow stopped its redevelopment efforts is also ridiculous. In fact, no lawsuits have been filed against the City by clients represented by LSNC for several years. Cushing ignores the fact that redevelopment has and is continuing. He also ignores the fact that much if not all of the blame for the show pace of redevelopment lies with

Protesting sewer plant

It is with much distraught, concern and anger that I heard about the City of West Sacramento's plan to build a sewage treatment plant near my Gregory Avenue home. I raise my voice in protest of such a planned facility for many reasons.

First of all, us residents of rural West Sacramento (Southport) do not welcome such massive development in our area. Such an obtrusive structure not only clutters the serene landscape of the countryside, but also is environmentally distasteful, adding unwanted noise and air pollution in an otherwise placid setting. I feel that such a gargantuan unwanted eyesore would best be served in an area more conducive to industrial clatter.

We in the countryside already have cesspools that contain our raw sewage, so in essence, a proposed plant in our backyard would serve us no useful purpose. We cannot allow our area to be used as a dumping ground for the City's waste. Urban waste should be kept in urban areas.

A proposed plant would only be used to accommodate future development. With our area already cluttered by unsightly track homes such as Windsor Meadows, we should work more towards maintaining the unique characteristics that epitomize the countryside -- homes built with distinct character. Instead, it seems that the City of West Sacramento will not rest until Southport becomes just another bland suburbia.

I stand to inherit our house one day. It is a house that has stood since the 1950s, directly across the street from a huge field which harvests a variety of crops. We already suffered some inconvenience when the City of West Sacramento forced new street addresses upon us, demolishing addresses that have been maintained for years. Now the City wants to clutter our landscape with a noisy, malodorous eyesore. I, on the other hand, want my future kids to grow up with the same beautiful countryside that I had.

Just the other day, my girlfriend and I took a midnight walk down the length of Gregory Avenue. She, being from the city of San Francisco, marveled at the peacefulness of the countryside. The full moon served as a perfect backdrop as we strolled along to a harmony provided by an orchestra of various country being -- dogs, insects, frogs, birds, and the like. We also noticed the next day that many people exercise along Gregory Avenue. They either walk, jog, or bike down the street, undoubtedly lured by the serene landscape that the country has to offer. There is a certain stillness that amazes one who lives here, a stillness that would be catastrophically ruined by a proposed sewage plant.

We cannot let our countryside be exploited. When I was a kid waiting for the school bus to pick me up, my mother would tell me two things. First, she would tell me to open my eyes real wide and see as far as I could see. Secondly, she would tell me to take a deep breath of the country air, which she rightly believed was the best air in the world. Now, both the air and the serenity of the countryside are at grave risk.

I would like to close by reiterating my opposition to such a proposed plant. I believe that the City should keep it's own "crap" in the City, and not dump it in the country. We have our own self-sufficient sewage systems that do not rely on huge plants. It is a practice of the federal government to dump toxic wastes on the Native American reservations, offering a token compensation to various tribes for the destruction of their environment. I liken the proposed sewage plant to this. However, there is no such compensation -- real or imagined -- for such an environmentally unfriendly plant.

We, the citizens of West Sacramento, and particularly rural residents, need to take a stand for the sake of our environment. Our air, land and piece of mind are at stake. Although residents in the country are outnumbered by those in the City, I believe that we can start a movement against such a proposed plant. For our children's sake, we have no choice but to fight it.

Anger at meeting

The August 23 meeting at the Westfield school was highly emotional most of the time, many would argue for good cause. Whether the reckless drivers kill the little ones playing in or near the streets, or whether the toll is taken as a result of preteeners playing in the ditch where who-knows-what gets dumped near the railroad, the fired-up arguments as to who is to blame result.

It was surprising to learn that the State has such strict rules that prevents four-way stops at intersections such as Michigan and Maple Streets until the accident level or number of deaths reach a certain level. State does not allow local law enforcement to factor in other elements (e.g., moving violations at said intersection) to arrive at an overall safety rating to justify four-way stops. The State seems to fear that the State will be sued (for unnecessary stop signs) if an accident occurs where some driver did not expect a stop sign at a particular location where (s)he has an accident. If the State does not allow local authorities more leeway or take a more active role in accident prevention, the State will be sued for more accidents (it allowed to happen) at greater taxpayer cost.

Calls for more police patrol ran into a road block when no one could figure out how to pay for same...who wants more taxes? Some contend we allocate too much for new development (such as Southport) and too little for current operating expenses, be they more police or items such as better fence for the ditch near the railroad or piping of the apparently poisonous liquid that gets there. But if we put in pipes, where would they start and end, since we do not know who "contributes" the deadly materials and from where...sounds somewhat like the irresponsible dumping into our sewers elsewhere in our City, eh? Why not change the dumping fees into "recycling bonuses" and charge those affected some other kind of "makeup" fee?

The next night's Planning Commission meeting was dominated by the trucking organizations in our City. They were calling for all kinds of rule relaxations to allow trucking to expand in West Sacramento. While emphasizing how many jobs and how much money they were pumping into our local economy, the trucking group rep implied Sacramento had "free land" if they should relocate en masse...after forcing so many over here to get rid of them? (Warning/note: Land would have to be cleaned up before selling, right?)

Fan of Dave

As yet another former precinct worker who had the opportunity to work on the Dukakis campaign in 1988 under the outstanding leadership of David Jones, I was extremely dismayed to read the comments of Ray Cushing in the column published on August 9, 1995. Hope Herr, in her letter, effectively demolished Mr. Cushing's factual errors and correctly noted that the court made the final decision that went against the city.

Madeline Iorns, in her letter on August 23, made an eloquent defense of David Jones and correctly explained the purpose and selection process for White House fellows. I agree that David Jones has made great efforts as an attorney for Northern California Legal Services to assist low-income people with housing problems. As a Harvard Law School graduate, Mr. Jones could certainly have made a much more lucrative living in the private sector without enduring the torrent of invectives that his work as a legal advocate for the poor has brought him.

My impression from Mr. Cushing's article plus your editorial on August 23 is that the availability of cheap lodging in downtown West Sacramento is the reason for the presence of so many prostitutes and that doing away with some of the "cheap lodging," which those of low income call "affordable housing," would help to drive the prostitutes away.

There are other factors working here, such as motel owners tolerating the prostitutes using their facilities (surely they know who they are) and using their clout to preserve parking areas for the large trucks whose drivers are using their facilities "temporarily." Surely we do not have to deprive low-income persons of lodging they can afford in order to drive out the prostitutes. If the motels are demolished and the law requires replacement housing, the would appear to me to be the way to go.

Fat? Sick and Tired?

So was I. Overweight, suffering from chronic fatigue, experiencing hair loss, anxiety resulting in heart palpitations, and poor diet attached to a high stress work environment, blah, blah, blah. . . (Sound familiar?)

Well, today I have lost over 50 lbs., I weigh what I did as a high school junior nearly 18 years ago, the hair loss has stopped, the heart problems have ceased, my diet has greatly improved, and I no longer experience the high stress in virtually the same line of business.

This may not work for everyone, but if you want to know how to get off the track to a short life-span and one that may add years to a more productive and healthier life, simply call (800) 836-9180. I will send you a free tape, and personally return your call.

I wouldn't be offering this product to you if I hadn't used it for over 1 1/2 years and believed in it myself.

Woodland Opera House kicks off its 100th anniversary year with a blockbuster musical to open its new theatre season. Actors' Equity Assn. guest artist Ken Sonkin, in the title role, heads up the cast of The Will Rogers Follies. This rip-roarin', foot-stompin' musical about the life of America's legendary cowboy-humorist and philosopher, Will Rogers, opens September 8 and plays Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. through September 30. There are two Sunday matinees scheduled for 2 p.m. on September 10 and 17. The September 10 matinee will be interpreted in American sign language for the hearing impaired. WOH is fully air-conditioned, handicap accessible and has newly installed hearing devices available for audience members who may need them.

The Will Rogers Follies was awarded six Tony Awards, including Best Musical and was a huge success at Music Circus a few seasons ago. WOH regulars Russ Bruch as Will's father, Clem, and Dan Slauson as Will's best friend Wiley Post, join Mr. Sonkin along with Julie Coffland as Will's wife, Betty, and Natalie Armstrong as the showgirl known as "Ziegfeld's Favorite." John Murphy returns to WOH's stage as Florenz Ziegfeld and the Rogers' children will be played by Robbie Kolb, Nick Ponticello, Jonathan Cagle-Mulberg and Michel Patrician (last season's "Annie"). Rounding out the cast are Jeris Baker, Paul Fearn, Fay Grundel, Rickaye Harris, Sallie Hasseltine, Paula Ketchel, Kerrie Kuhl, Natalia Luna, Scott Martin, Michael Miller, Jennifer Newman, Lee Riggs, Joe Schulte, Moyna Shipley, Marla Valdes, Shelley Walker and Angela Yee.

Director Wally Hurst, along with WOH artistic director Elaine Edstrom, music director Tina Reves and choreographer Ron Cisneros, has been honing the musical numbers until they are "eye poppers." L.M. Alexander, Charlotte French and Lenore Justman have created costumes and showy headpieces that span from the 1890s to the 1930s, along with all the glitz and glamour found in the Ziegfeld Follies costumes.

Except for opening night, main floor tickets are priced at $16 for adults and $14.50 for seniors and students; balcony seats are $12 and $11. Opening night tickets, which include a gourmet post show buffet with Mr. Sonkin and the cast, are $25 each. MasterCard and VISA cards are accepted and WOH honors Entertainment '95 "2 for 1" coupons, KVIE Gold Card and KXPR membership discounts. All seats are reserved. For reservations and information, phone WOH at 666-9617.

NIGHT BECOMES DAY
Richard McGuire
Viking. Unpaged.
Using a dream-like logic, the author brings kids along on a journey of cause and effect. "Valley becomes town, town becomes street, street becomes highway, highway becomes bridge. . ." You get the idea. A good introduction for youngsters into the somewhat abstract concept of "becoming."

BIGGEST, STRONGEST, FASTEST
Steve Jenkins. Ticknor & Fields. Unpaged.
What's the biggest snake? The longest animal? The best jumper? See, even you adults could learn a lot from this charming journey through the animal kingdom. Curl up with a favorite youngster and discover together which animals are Mother Nature's record-holders. Artfully illustrated. Oh--the answers are anaconda, sun jellyfish and flea.

HISTORY

A PIONEER SAMPLER
Barbara Greenwood
Ticknor & Fields.
240 pages.
Following the fictional Robertson family through their day-to-day lives in 1840, the reader learns exactly what it was like to be a pioneer. The author intersperses stories about the Robertsons with factual explanations of such devices as the grist mill and butter churn. Realistically illustrated, this is juvenile history at its liveliest.

Affordable housing in Broderick

Plans are proceeding for a 90-unit affordable housing project on land owned by Lighthouse Marina in West Sacramento's Broderick (northeastern) area.

The "Washington Couryard Affordable Housing Project" will be bounded by 7th, 8th, E and F streets. Part of the plan calls for abandonment of 8th St. between E and F streets.

A "mitigated negative declaration" has been filed for the project, which is to be built by the St. Anton Partners, a limited liability corporation, to meet affordable housing goals required for Lighthouse.

"They're seeking a lot consolidation," said West Sacramento senior planner Harry Gibson. "They're also seeking the abandonment of 8th St."

The public comment period on the project closes Sept. 1.

Stubbs said the issue involved the other stresses already on the Sacramento River and Delta, including upstream mining and pesticide use which contaminate the river. Any new pollutants, even from a "green" project such as a recycling plant, therefore, become the subject of debate.

"I don't think this plant itself causes any great problems," he added.

But the plant's impacts are being debated because they might worsen the water quality (and raise the cost of treatment) for water users downstream. The debate is centering around the recently released environmental impact report for a new city sewage plant, which is partly designed to handle the paper plant's effluent.

By increasing stresses on the Delta, the plant could also force the curtailing of the amount of water downstream users are allowed to draw.

The Metropolitan Water Agency of Los Angeles, for example, wrote the city a letter which states that it opposes the construction of the new sewage plant in conjunction with the paper plant, unless further mitigation measures are included.

Stubbs said his company and its German partner, Haindl Papier, are still waiting for recycled newsprint prices to bring a favorable return on the paper plant's construction.

"The good news is that prices are very strong right now and it looks like they're going to stay strong," he commented. "But the equipment costs have increased pretty dramatically. And the prices of used newsprint are up also, so both the costs and the return have risen together. The return on investment is still pretty marginal."

The public comment period on the environmental impact report (EIR) ended last week. The EIR will head to the West Sacramento City Council for certification.

The plant is slated for the Southport Industrial Park, located roughly between Summerfield Dr. and the deep water shipping channel in Southport.

CHAOS

by BRIAN SHUSTER

The reign of terror began when Rollo and his group of thugs took over the television station and immobilized the city.

MOTEL: undercover drug buys from p. 1

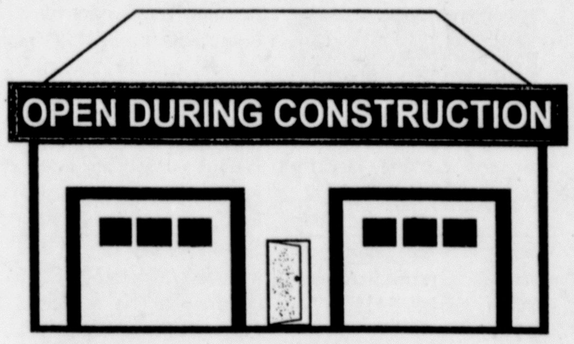

The owner could not immediately be contacted. The phone number listed in the phone book for the Westside Motel is disconnected, and a message for Gee at the Harbor Market next door (which he also owns) was not immediately returned.

Lt. Moore said landlords can be held legally responsible for allowing crime such as drug sales on their properties.

"They're responsible for running an establishment that doesn't create a nuisance for the community around it," Moore commented. "They're responsible for renting rooms to people who are not going to be causing trouble."

"It was way out of line," he said of Westside. "The message is that we're going to pursue properties that are out of line."

fore a players returns it over the net. As long as it isn't rolling, the point continues.

Other West Sac. players included Erin Cheechov, Kyle Fisher, Anthony and Chris Bianchi, Eric O'Connor, Nikki Hansen, David Berger and Brett Stockdale.

Current and alumni R.C.H.S. varsity tennis team members helped Brooks with the event. Jeff Wright, Bethany Monroe, Mirthala Santizo, Julio Gomez, Brian Benson (R.C. '92), and Hoang Truong (R.C. '95) assisted the younger players with scorekeeping and officiating.

"We're looking at doing this again," said Brooks. "Everyone had such a good time, playing tennis and making new friends, that we'll probably be back out here in late September before USTA Jr. Team Tennis fall league matches begin for the high school players. We thought about calling it the `First Annual,' but none of us want to wait twelve months to get everyone together again!"
